Disclaimer

Albion Chambers is not a company, a firm or a legal entity. All barristers in England and Wales practise as self-employed individuals. For practical and economic reasons we share overheads and resources, and so co-operate to form a set of “chambers”. There are currently 75 barristers at Albion Chambers including five Queen’s Counsel and three door tenants.

This website has been designed to provide information only. Any comments made or views expressed on the law within any articles on this website are the views of the writer and are not necessarily the views of any other member of chambers and should not be relied upon as legal advice.

Members of Albion Chambers may provide advice to individuals on specific cases via a practising solicitor or a member of a recognised professional body as approved by the Bar Council. The exception to these guidelines is work undertaken by members who are accredited under the Public Access Scheme. Please click here for details of our Public Access work.
